THE BARBER

DAVID SANDUSKY

As the barber heard the turning of the lock, he threw aside the "Plato" he was reading for educational purposes, and glanced at the clock. It was 9:50 and the customer coming in now would be the last before closing time. The barber straightened his rather rumpled white jacket and said, "Good evening." The man slipped off his coat, loosened his tie, and slid hurriedly into the barber's chair.

"Quick haircut and shave, please," he said.

While tying the sheet, the barber thought, "Rather seedy fellow. Good clothes though—must be in a hurry to get somewhere"—and thinking no more of it he gave his customer the haircut.

The barber tried to start a conversation with the man, and his customer had answered politely enough, but with little interest. And now as he ran his razor across the lathered face, he studied it abstractly as he was wont to do with all who sat in his barber's chair. The observations he made to himself showed a keen accurateness developed only by constant practice.

"Sensitive, rather weak face, had an easy life and now when the going's rough he can't quite make the grade—rather worried about something or other. We all have our troubles, I guess"... and his mind shifted to his own cares, the gravity of which he was able to conceal from everybody but his wife and himself. Barbering in a small town wasn't a paying proposition. The farmers would sooner allow their whiskers to grow than spend the fifty cents for a haircut and shave. He couldn't get rid of the shop; hospital bills to be paid; and a doctor for his wife and month-old baby. Too bad Janet had to be tied down to a failure such as he. Then realizing the futility of self-pity, he turned his attention again to the man in his chair.

"Odd," he thought, "I've seen that fellow before. Couldn't be positive though—might have seen his picture." Then he remembered—it was yesterday. At the post office he had watched the sheriff nailing up a poster advertising the search for Godfrey Wood. Wood was wanted for forgery, and what had interested the barber most was the five hundred dollars offered for his capture. Five hundred dollars was just the sum he needed to put himself on his feet again. What luck!

"Funny, though, he should be back only ten miles from Midlan where he's wanted, when he could be on his way to Mexico by now"...

The riddle absorbed the barber; he pondered over it, but still a logical explanation eluded him. It didn't matter, though—what mattered was that here was the chance to garner the reward. It should be an easy job to subdue him. The bulletin had mentioned that the forger was not a killer, and he was bigger and stronger than the man.

But still that little detail fretted the barber until at last he asked casually:

"You're in a hurry to get somewhere, aren't you?" The man did not answer. Suddenly the customer burst out:

"Have to be in Midlan as soon as possible. My wife's having a baby! She's pretty sick, I hear. Couldn't let her see me as I was . . ."

In spite of himself the barber was sympathetic.

"Must have loved his wife," he reasoned, "to come back to see her with all the police in the state looking for him. Hard on the poor fellow, but still he's wanted by the law, and I need the money!"

As the barber was thus torn between his conscience and his pocketbook, he heard from upstairs a baby beginning to cry. He listened and soon he heard the low, soothing voice of his wife quieting the child.

Then silence—

The setness of the barber's lips softened, the struggle within him subsided and swiftly and surely he finished shaving his customer. The man arose quickly, straightened his necktie, and donned his coat. He handed a half-dollar to the barber and as he opened the door he heard the barber call cheerily, "Good luck!"

The barber put the coin in the cash register, bolted the door, picked up his "Plato," extinguished the light, and walked slowly up the stairs.

PROFUNDITY

Words, Interlopers of thought, Idiots' coin. Ah, would that you were not, And all expression Found in music, In poetry, In lovely contemplation. You say words are beautiful? Only a poet's dream, Only a composer's fantasy Is verbal beauty.

REFLECTION

the still waters of the soul wherein the heart is seen as a shadow deep in the pool; and dropped pebbles, make unceasing patterns of prismatic life. MARY LITWIN

FLORENCE C. BAZELON

But dreams are bred in silence; And silence Is the wise man's god. Would too, All peoples of the world were And only birds Could utter sound. Then music And poetry And all things wonderful on this earth Would live.

REQUIEM

Weep not for babes who breathe but once and die Nor at the closing of an agedimmed eye, But for the young, with glowing eyes, who say: "When I am grown" and never reach that day. MARLENE URBACH

MELODY

FLORENCE C. BAZELON

Silently he made his way through the lonely night. Before him dimly shone the lights of a distant town.

Of course Mibs was happy, she was free. At the moment her attention was entirely focussed upon the all-important subject of what gown to wear.

He stumbled, but by straining every muscle, every nerve, he managed to save himself from falling and continued on his way. The dim lights shone brighter.

Mibs chanted a popular tune. Her heart was lighter than air; her voice, a terrible one for tone, sounded sweet with happiness. She took a pale orchid mussoline de soie creation, that billowed and ruffled in a most becoming manner, from its hanger. She held it up to her and was quite pleased with the effect. She continued to hum.

A transparent melody shimmered above his head. It entered his consciousness and entangled itself about his senses. Dazed, he listened. Awed, he memorized its beauty, while his heart sang the words, the wordless words. How bright the lights were.

"Goodnight, Mom, I'm taking the car and calling for Byrdie.

Don't expect me for breakfast."

The melody grew louder, the lights dazzled, slowly he climbed the worn porch steps.

Mibs slammed the car door shut and rushed up the worn porch steps three at a time, almost colliding with the figure huddled at the top of the steps.

"Hello, what's this? Who are you?" Mibs fairly screamed with fright and breathlessness.

The figure was humming a strange haunting tune that sounded sweet yet hollow to Mibs' ears. The man scarcely noticed the girl as he continued to hum his melody.

It swam through her mind; its wantonness, like some beautiful image, hypnotized her, until even her voice was enslaved, and she too began to hum. Their voices, scarcely audible, clung together, blending, while the hollow tone vanished and a new fullness sounded.

The stranger turned to her and smiled a slow deliberate smile, that tore at her heart, suffocating her. Then, after rising, gripping her shoulders and looking deep into Mibs' eyes, he disappeared.

Eight years later, a woman, matured beyond her years took her place in the Mayor's Box at the Grand Music Hall. With her was her husband, the Mayor. People pointed them out as the perfect couple, for none could see inside of her heart.

The leader raised his baton, the lights dimmed, the overture began. The melody seethed through her brain, haunting her, hypnotizing her, enslaving her voice and once again she began to hum a tune that her heart had memorized long before. Her husband turned to look at her and to his understanding eye came the vision of his wife . . . free.

I SEEK THE CRYSTAL STREAM

I seek the crystal stream, Where on soft whispers The evening wind comes to cool itself . . .

For I would bathe in diamond water, And would drink of liquid like the morning dew . . .

Limpidly it runs over smooth white pebbles, In a far-away land where the sun sets a wondrous purple, And birds who shame the flaming peacock, O'erflow with so divine a rain of melody— He stills his lyre, does Israfel, to listen in despair . . .

And when the last violet tinge has left the sky,
And the harmony diurnal has slowly thinned to silence.
Stoops the evening wind over a mystic paradise—
To sway in utter tranquility,
E'er departing on pulsating wings—
To cool the night of other lands . . .

Ah yes—
I seek the crystal stream,
Where on soft whispers,
The evening wind comes to cool itself . . .

DAVID SANDUSKY

ETERNAL QUESTION

The child's round eyes were turned on me;

"Oh, what is beyond the sky?" she asked:

"Space," I answered, stroking her head,

"Oh!"—and she skipped off happily. Returning later with troubled face,

"What is beyond the space?" asked she,

I found myself answering hollowly,

"Space," I whispered, "Space—space-space!"

MARLENE URBACH

TANTALUS

THELMA LEVITT

The rain rushed violently down in torrents. The night was bleak and gray. The man drew his filthy, tattered coat collar about him and shivered. His drawn, hungry face looked pathetically envious as he stared at the warmly clothed pedestrians passing to and fro. His brain seemed to throb with a steady beat, "Something to eat! Something to eat!" He blew on his hands to put some warmth into them.

Suddenly a car came to an abrupt stop, and the chauffeur opened the door for a woman whose throat and arms were covered with jewels. As she stood for a moment, apparently waiting for someone, the beggar noticed hanging from her wrist, a bracelet which was held from falling to the ground by a tiny catch. His heart pounded as he realized how easily the bracelet might fall—fall into his possession. He grew faint and closed his eyes a second as if to gain vitality. He moved slowly towards the woman. His plan was to lurch drunkenly against her quite accidentally. That would loosen the bracelet into his hands. He glanced about him to see that no one was watching. Reassured he moved closer and closer to her and stretched out his grimy hand.

Suddenly, the bracelet grew larger and larger and began to whirl around and around. The woman, the car, the people, the houses, all whirled about him into space.

The woman turned as a small crowd of people gathered near her. "What happened?" she asked, as a man arose from his kneeling position near the prostrate figure.

"Dead, poor beggar!" he exclaimed.

ARTEMIS

She, is a sliver of silver, now a gleaming disk. But the clouds are jealous. They smother her and tear her apart, and make her vanish. Yet she returns again and grows again eternally.

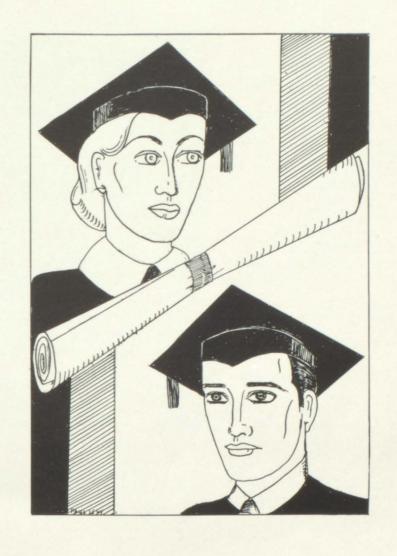

Is it Artemis or yet another?

MARY LITWIN

PIONEER

He stands alone
In a world that is cruel
To theorists.
He waits alone
For his brethren to follow
Where they want not to go.
He came alone,
And waits tirelessly
But they will come
At the end of a millenium.

MONOLOGUE

Shadows stretch somberly across our path, They are dim shadows, yet dark enough, That we must peer carefully ahead Lest we stumble into the obscurity Which lines either side of the narrow way.

You say: Shadows are intangible, nothingness, And a light can easily dispel them. But do you carry that shining light? You say: Surely, four years have testified to that!

Yes, you have been catalogued, your virtues extolled Your accomplishments recognized and accorded. But beyond these shadows, out there—Will they realize your merits, your wisdom, Will they bear your faults and correct them, Concede your attainments, and give you your due?

Then we wonder—have these things been too easily acknowledged, Have they been overestimated——?

DAVID SANDUSKY

CLASS WILL

Four years ago, we, who are now the mighty Seniors of South Side, were new-born high school students. Now, we are about to leave this life. We feel it necessary, at the point of our departure from this world into the future life, to leave behind us, a will, so that our benefactors (its benficiaries) shall profit thereby (we hope). We, representatives of the Class of January in the year of our Lord, nineteen hundred thirty-seven, being hearby sound in mind (yeah! solid throughout) and body, do hereby draw up this:

LAST WILL AND TESTAMENT OF THE CLASS OF JANUARY, 1937

Section I: To Mr. Belcher, our principal:

The high esteem and gratitude of this Senior Class for giving us his helpful advice and constructive criticism.

Section II: To Mr. Strong, our class adviser:

Faint recollections of the 4B class committee.

Section III: To our Teachers:

(a) Mr. Kirk-

That some day he might penetrate the South Side skull and inflict upon it some History facts.

(b) Miss Rivoli-

The sympathy attached to the proof problem.

(c) Mr. Cain-

The pleasure of satisfying future Seniors with fewer tickets than the few we had.

(d) Mr. Gordon-

The tortures of instructing the band during the football season.

(e) Mr. Warenreich-

A depletion in the ranks of his Optimist circulation staff.

(f) Mr. Hutchinson-

The worry over that Senior debt.

Section IV: To the Senior B's:

The ideal of an Optimist with five pictures on a page, and a promoutside the school.

Section V: Advice to Freshmen:

Be good kiddies and listen to teachers. Never argue with Seniors. Section VI: To the school at large:

(a) The bad odors of the Chem. lab.

(b) The front of the school for seating purposes.

(c) The faculty who are now convalescing from the ordeal of tolerating us for four years.

We do hereby appoint Mr. Franklin Strong, executor of this, our last will and testament. We set in witness thereof, our last seal, this January, in the year of our Lord nineteen hundred and thirty-seven.

ATHLETICS

BOYS

Again the time comes when our athletic coaches are hurt and grieved by—Yes! You've guessed it. Graduation! This class of February, 1937, will take with it no less than fourteen members from seven different teams. Oh my!

From the baseball team, our diamond maestro, Mr. Ben Leon, will lose two valuable letter men, Seymour Solomon, and Morris Steinberg, who won his letter as the team manager.

Coach Thornton will have to do without Donald Powell and Thomas Ryan next year. Both of these boys won their block "S", Powell as a halfback and Ryan for managing the team so diligently.

Four members of Mr. Thornton's track team will not start with the gun for South Side next year. Although none of them received their letters for this sport, they copped many a point for their dear old Alma Mamma on the cinders. These fellows are Howard Popper, the sprinter, Edward Weinberg and Henry (Red) Prosnitz, the team's hurdlers, and David Sandusky, the javelin hurler.

Escaping from South Side will be three members of our City Championship swimming team. All three of these swimming sharks have earned their gold "S". They are Philip Trachtenberg, the backstroke star; William MacGregor, the team's free-style man; and Martin Steinberg, who efficiently managed the team for two seasons on its championship voyage.

Although Mr. Cain will lose only one member of his fencing team with the going of this class, he is one of the main cogs of our excellent group of gladiators; Robert Schoen, who has captained and led the fencing team for two years. He was feared by South Side's strongest rivals. Of course, he was the recipient of the script "S" that goes to all deserving fencers.

Now, last but by no means least, we have Jack Gonshak, star of the uncoached but mighty gym team. Jack owes all that he knows and does in the way of gymnastics only to himself. He earned the Gym Team emblem in no uncertain fashion.

GIRLS

With this term's graduation, goes the last class to see the glories of the old South Side annex, where boys were boys and girls were the athletic stars. Them whar the days when our present athletes thought hockey was played on a horse. But despite this, the annex yielded mighty fine girl athletes, such as Mina Gerber, Rhoda Krueger, Dorothy Walkenberg, Harriet Singer, Eleanor Schessler, Christine Zommer, and Helen Bishop, all mighty wielders of the hockey stick. Due recognition must be given to Miss Rubinow, the one Madisonite in our midst. Jean, take your bow!

If we brag when we say our athletes are the "real stuff", we have good cause. The proof is in the pudding, may we present ours? In 1934, Mina was awarded the position of left fullback on the North Jersey Hockey Team, while in 1935, Rhoda placed right halfback on the second team. It was that very year, just after Miss Ryder left, that these same girls coached the others, and it was that year that the hockey girls played so well when representing South Side at the North Jersey hockey meet, and as a result, won three places—the best record yet to be met with. Yes, Mina and Rhoda also rate high as coaches.

While these girls were busy smacking hockey balls around, Marge List and Catherine Holgate kept themselves occupied slamming pingpong balls back and forth. Here were two female athletes who jeopardized the boys' reputation, but even they, and you know how grudgingly they pay homage to female athletic prowess, had to admit that Marge and Catherine were just "tops." And did you know Marge won the girls' championship? In fact, all she needed to beat the boys was the chance.

W-h-i-z-bull's eye! Watch yore noses, fellers, them thar gals shore can handle bows and arrows. Have you watched them? Well I have, and I'm here to tell you, they're crack shots. Here again Christine, Eleanor, Harriet, Jean, Mina, Rhoda, and also Doris Hoagland excelled. Our Dianas were invited to the state tournament held at Panzer College, where four-man teams from the whole state of New Jersey competed. Great was their surprise and joy, when, after a fine complimentary speech in their favor, our girls won high individual honors in addition to the elegant placque awarded for the highest points. The team was photographed with the trophy proudly displayed to the best advantage, and the newspapermen promptly left with their spoils, when lo and behold, the trophy was taken back midst a great apology. Yes, just a mistaken calculation! But, only secondarily are our girls athletes, primarily they are good sports. Moreover, our girls came out second, and were only fifteen points behind the winning team. Here Rhoda Krueger won second place in individual honors, a South Side alumnus having taken first place.

Yes, sir, with hockey sticks raised above his head and arrows whizzing past his ears, a fellow's life just isn't safe around these hyere parts.

CLASS OFFICERS

Behold our class officers—We elected them. Why? Was it because they were competent and dependable, or because they were just "good sorts"? Perhaps the logical answer is that they are a happy median, talented but friendly also.

Seymour Feder, our President, is ably assisted by Leslie Grubin, Ruth Drazin, and Morty Grebelsky; as Vice President, Secretary and Treasurer respectively.

We thank them and approve of them.

HONOR SOCIETY

To South Side belongs the privilege of membership in the National Honor Society. This is an organization of more than 1200 chapters scattered throughout all parts of the nation. The South Side Honor Society became a chapter of the national organization in 1929. It is composed of those students of the 3A, 4B, and 4A classes who have attained high standards of Character, Scholarship, Leadership, and Service. They have served South Side this year in various ways; the most important being the preparation of a handbook of information concerning all activities of the school.

The senior members of our Chapter are as follows: Henrietta Spingarn; Florence Bazelon; Ruth Feldman; Miriam Wilensky; Mina Gerber, president; Miss White, sponsor; Jack Hosid, secretary; Shirley Gelfand; Mae Salinger; Norma Melchior; Anna Haye; Florence Opperman; Marjorie List; Jean Rubinow; Rhoda Krueger; Doris Hoagland; Jane Levy; Beatrice Bernstein; Donald Powell; Harold Glaser; George Dowden; Dorothy Walkenberg; Helen Krasner; Seymour Feder; Richard Newman; Irving Wizon; Joseph Bernstein; Jack Geist; Sylvia Goldstein.

First Row: Miss H. J. Wolfs, Mina Gerber, Virginia Casson, Dorothea Reu, Agnes Woodside, Jean Rubinow, Catherine Holgate, Bessie Lakos, Helen Haug, Phoebe Fern.

PHOTOGRAPHY CLUB

Photography is a very absorbing subject and the Photography Club is a popular one. The keen interest evinced during one of the contests is ample proof of that. It is needless to say that the club has developed many interesting studies.

The picture above is comprised of both the Senior and Junior Photography group. Mr. C. Norman Finkel is in charge of the two. The officers of the Senior division are President, Seymour Lehrhoff; Vice President, Morton Batlan; and Secretary, Florence Leviss.

The Junior division is headed by Julian Batlan, President; Bessie Lakos, as Vice President; and Helen Hanz, as secretary.

THE SENIOR DRAMATIC CLUB

The Dramatic Club, under the able supervision of Mr. Joyce, has once again completed a successful season with the presentation of that hilarious play, "The Call of The Banshee". The finances were handled by Miss Gennet and Mr. Weinert, while credit for technical effects goes to Mrs. Coe, and the art department.

The club is functioning smoothly under the leadership of the following officers. The President is Florence Held, Bernard Goldstein is the Vice President, and Anne Petlock is the Secretary.

JUNIOR SECRETARIES CLUB

The Junior Secretaries Club came into existence with the introduction of the commercial courses in South Side High School. The members, just as the name implies, are the secretaries of the future. The club has attained its present size and efficiency through the training and guidance of its faculty adviser, Miss Lillian Doroson. The officers are as follows: President, Helen Krasner; Vice President, Selma Sheitelman; Secretary, Shirley Gelfand.

The club was organized for the purpose of giving our commercial students a chance to come in closer contact and familiarize themselves with the procedure and etiquette of the business world. To achieve this aim lectures, debates, plays, and investigations of business concerns are planned.

BUSINESS GIRLS' CLUB

The Business Girls' Club is a newly formed organization at South Side this year. It was organized under the guidance of Miss Carrie E. Rivoli, Commercial Teacher.

The purposes are: 1. Development of personality for business and society. 2. Promotion of general culture and civic improvement. 3. The development of social intercourse. Above all, the club proposes to develop the spirit of cooperation, the desire for individual improvement, and the ability to get along with people.

The diversified program includes: trips to business organizations in the city, plays on business activities, interviews with business executives, debates on topics of interest to the business girl, reviews of books on vocations, and lectures and discussions on the necessary training, qualities, and personality traits needed for success in business.

The officers elected for this term are: President, Mae Teitlebaum; Vice President, Doris Reichenbecher; and Secretary, Frances Shwedsky.

BOYS' GLEE CLUB

South Side is the proud possessor of a large Boys' Glee Club. Directed and advised by Miss Murphy, it has been doing good work since its organization two terms ago. This year the club has as officers and members: President, George Plutchok; Vice President, Barney Lieb; Secretary, Alfred Tedlow.

First Tenors: Harry Hazelwood, Norman Lichtin, Monte Barron, Seymour Bestrechsky, and Gerson Lipowitz.

Second Tenors: Leo Salley, Sidney Venetsky, Harold Wax, Ira Dworkin, Paul Brooke, Lathrop Morgan, and Charles Haum.

First Basses: George Dowden, Paul Zigman, Jack Schwartz, Norman Turkel, Conrad Butler, Seymour Tenner, Harold Wallace, James Shea, Earl Hastings, and Jonas London.

Second Basses: Sidney Lewitter, Henry Ehrenkranz, Leonard Zablodowsky, John Kropenick, Oliver Chamberlain, Jacob Gonshak, Victor Kuzcynski, Jerome Westreich, Albert Stillwell, and Albert Haase.

GIRLS' GLEE CLUB

The Girls' Glee Club under the direction of Miss Agnes C. Murphy, has elected as its officers, the following members: President, Mary Stancati; Vice President, Ruth Lee; Secretary-Treasurer, Ruth Campbell. The club which meets every Tuesday and Thursday, has numbered among its most delightful songs, Franz Shubert's "Serenade" and "Home to the Mountain" by Verdi.

Sopranos: Charlotte Balsam, Betty Asen, Mary Stancati, Naomi Miller, Joan Surma, Catherine Holgate, Eleanor Mueller, Florence Voigt, Ester Arons, Esta Schwartz, Rosalyn Bessenof, Annette Murphy, Jeanette Walker, Minnie Notkin, Hilda Gennet, Florence Busch, Elsie Traub, and Doris Trugman.

Second Sopranos: Marjorie List, Gertrude Green, Shirley Yeskin, Alice Kuna, Bernice Phillips, Anne Perlman, Harriet Papier, Adele Koenig, Edith Vosswinkle, Henrietta Agisin, Norma Melchior, Anna Haye, Helen Felter, Helen Stein, Edna Milroad, Eleanor Wallach, Anna Affatica, Geneva Walker, and Goldie Freed.

Altos: Edele Engel, Ruth Campbell, Ruth Lee, Ruth Tischler, Ruth Warhaftig, Iris Johnson, Rose Dawson, Dorothy Gould, and Miriam Fox.

THE VOCATIONS CLUB

One of the most useful clubs in the school is the Vocations Club. At the meetings, which are held every second week, many interesting lectures and debates are given dealing with topics confronting average individuals in the occupational fields. The members also make studies of the various occupations that interest them. The courses in high school and college entrance requirements are also discussed at the meetings.

The officers are: Catherine Casson, President; Olivia Hammond, Vice President; Beverly Mortenson, Secretary. Mr. Charles Holland is the faculty adviser.

THE JUNIOR DRAMATIC CLUB

The response to the Junior Dramatic Club was so great that it was necessary to organize two groups. Group Number One is under the supervision of Miss Waugh and Group Two has as its faculty adviser, Miss Ader. The first division has informal meetings weekly, whereas the latter group has its regular meeting every other week with Jack Schwartz as chairman and Betty Berlin as secretary. Miss Waugh's group has been practicing voice and body-work, and short sketches in order to produce a few one-act plays for general entertainment. Miss Ader's division is producing sketches regularly. From the looks of things, the Senior Dramatic Club will have fine material to work with in the near future.

THE SAFETY SQUAD

The Safety Squad, our all-occasion club, has come to the fore in the last two years. Through the energetic work of its members, this dependable organization is functioning in carrying out school betterment plans. Their object of a "Safe South Side" is well in view. A recent accomplishment of the Squad is the drawing and distribution of fire-drill charts.

The officers are: Howard Popper, chief; Bernard Goldstein, first deputy chief; Charles Halligan, second deputy chief; and Kenneth Hahneman, assistant deputy chief. Seymour Feder, former chief, is honorary adviser. Mr. Samuel P. Owen is the faculty adviser.

THE SCIENCE CLUB

The Science Club, of this term, has almost 100 members and is the largest club in the school. The officers are President, Jack Geist; Vice President, Abe Krasnoff; and Secretary, Betty Asen. Mr. Kanengeiser, of the Science Department, is its faculty adviser. The meetings have been most interesting up to this time and the club is looking forward to many more. At the meetings, interesting lectures and demonstrations are given, both by members of the club and various outsiders, on many phases of science. The club is also anticipating trips to nearby places of scientific interest.

Pun My Word!!!!

The radio was playing "I SINGER you, Baby." Mabel came into the room with a LIST in her hand.

"MENDELS-SON is coming, DOER-ING," she said.

"Take that ZACK!" roared Ruben, "ROTHER any OPPERMAN than MENDELS-SON."

"POLISKA don't be so cruel!" she

"POPPER," said Bart, their son, "Can I COE out and play ball against DE-WALD with GILBURD?"

"O KAY, but don't CHEATHAM," consented Ruben.

Bart threw on his SHACHAT and ran out LIEBing the door open.

"GREBELSKY, SCHLESINGER, WESOLOSKI, SCHWEDSKY, GOTT-FRIED!" cursed Ruben in an undertone, slamming the door.

The BELL rang. "O'DONNELL," sighed Mabel, HURLI'NG herself into his arms. "LEV-ISS ME " she murmured.

KUNA sleep nor eat," he answered. "I'll GONSHAK up a cocktail," said Mabel SCHOEN him to a chair.

"Did RUBINOW I was coming?" queried Donnell.

"Don't be BUZAR," she snapped. "He TUCK a walk."

"I left my heart in BAZELON," hummed Donnell.

"Is that a new tune you're SINGERing?"

"Yes, it's the KORIS of a SCHWING

Donnell put his arms around her. "Let's WALSH," he said.

Someone NACHT on the door. In came San, the Chinese valet. "SAN, DUSKY off the piano," ordered Mabel, to get rid of him.

Suddenly, in walked Ruben. "Take your hands off URBACH!" he roared. "Of ALLAMAN in this world, you,my own COUSIN!" He was overcome with emotion.

"Well, I'll be LEVINE," said Donnell. "Oh, scared-eh?" sneered Ruben.

"There is no BRAVERMAN than Donnell," defended Mabel.

The door closed. Donnell was gone.

"SHUM state of affairs I find!" taunted Ruben.

"Oh, LEE me alone," Mabel screamed. Bart came in with a scowl on his face. BARTsLAMmed the BROWN cat viciously. "HAYE! Don't be so GROSS-BART. LEVITT alone, I have to FED-ER yet," commanded Mabel.

"Aw, I'm not FRELING well," he

"Were you sun-STOKEd or been smoking SAGERS again, eh?" Mabel questioned.

"Didn't I tell you to see the DENES last week?" exclaimed Rubin.

I've already BINN to see him. SAMS POPPER was there, he'll tell you."

Their quarrel forgotten in their mutual anxiety over Bart, Mabel TUCKed him into bed while Ruben HALPER.

"I don't wanna!" he wailed. "FRANK-EL be coming soon."

"Some PORTER for you, my boy," ordered Ruben.

"No, no," he screamed. "I was GRUBIN around and I swallowed a PENN."

SCHOCKET they sent for Doctor Sid WEINBERG.

"I'll have to FISCHER out," he said. Bart turned GREEN with fright. "Oh, HANDLER him carefully!" cried

Ruben HELD him and the doctor FREED Bart of the PENN. "Look!" cried the doctor, "I didn't even BENDER."

"ZISMAN is a very good doctor," marveled Ruben, "MARKUS my words, he'll go far. Bart looks like a NEWMAN already."

Mabel, who was looking at the PENN suddenly exclaimed, "Oh, look, it has a GOLDSTEIN on it-we'll all be RICH!"

"HOSID!" ejaculated Ruben. "You sure are the REITMAN. I'll give you a GLASER schnapps!"

- S. Mendelson: "This is my newest picture, Collegians At Study. It's very realistic."

DOTS AND DASHES

Greetings Mr. and Miss Senior, this is your South Side correspondent Seymour Feder. Let's go to school! Flash! This is the last column your reporter will write for an Optimist. I hope you have enjoyed these writings and all the broadcasts from the auditorium stage, especially the one last February. Now for some facts and reminders of our stay in South Side. Flash! It certainly was surprising that we had some actors in the senior class (Call of the Banshee). Our great lover (Dick Newman) handled his part, or partner, in a way that will not soon be forgotten . . . Flash! The brightness of Helen Brodsky's smile in her senior picture made her proofs fade . . . At this time, your correspondent would like to award gardenias to Mr. Strong, our faculty adviser, who guided our class so well during the time we have been in South Side . . . Scoop! After much thought, your reporter has arrived at the fact that the South Side girl's theme song should be the "Conquered Him". (Not by Emerson) . . . Here are some of the romances that will not soon be forgotten: Les Grubin and Ruth Feldman, J. O'Donnel and V. M., Lew Rafey and Harriet Singer, Josephine Wesoloski and N.Y.U., Helen Bishop and Kansas, Marge List and B. K., and Monte Barron and ??? . . . Here are some things we will not forget . . . Florence Opperman's socialism, Joe Bernstein's dramatics, Jack Hosid's scholarship ability, Florence Bazelon's poetry, Harold Glaser's finance, and Don Powell's football . . . Dots and Dashes and lots of flashes from corridor to corridor and room to room . . . Flash! Your reporter was amazed at the pairings at the senior prom. It beat all expectations . . . By way of the high C's! South Side will be proud of the members of the band and orchestra who will graduate this winter. We will miss Sager's drumming, Kaplan's and Kline's saxophoning, Rafey's tuba and violin playing, Popper's trumpeting, and Samilson's tromboning . . At this time I would like to announce the dissolution of Wilensky, Gerber, and Co., botherers of Franklin Strong, teacher . . . The Optimist will lose such regular performers as Rhoda Krueger, Jack Geist, Mina Gerber, David Sandusky, Jean Rubinow, Florence Held, Doris Hoagland, Edith Vosswinkel, and Miriam Wilensky . . . Your reporter sincerely hopes that Mr. and Miss Senior will not forget the Safety squad and its helpful hand, especially at senior class meetings . . . Now for as much mail as space will allow-R.K.: There will be approximately two hundred and ten students graduating this term . . . Now, and for the last time, and with oceans of love, I remain your South Side correspondent Seymour Feder, who firmly believes that if South Side can make me regret to leave it, it must be a pretty swell school.
